Crawford Offers Cannabis Loss Management Service Solution

TORONTO (October 17, 2018) – Crawford & Company (Canada) Inc. a global provider of claims and risk management solutions, continues to develop and enhance our servicing capabilities to address emerging risks. As of October 17, 2018, recreational use of cannabis will be legal in Canada. Although stipulations have been put into place concerning usage, there remains a level of risk to be managed by employers and the insurance community as a whole tied to mainstream accessibility and usage. In response, Crawford has developed a service solution to address potential risks including residential and commercial property losses, automobile losses, employee risk management, along with forensic accounting and legal services.

“The legalization of cannabis in Canada is a recent development that we will have to address from within the insurance community and outside,” said Pat Van Bakel, president and chief executive officer, Crawford & Company (Canada) Inc. “Some associated risks and potential losses tied to property damage or theft around the growth of plants at residential properties, the management and transportation of cannabis grow-ops from a commercial standpoint, automobile incidents as a result of cannabis usage and overall employee management that addresses both medical and recreational usage. In response, we have developed a claims solution, incorporating legal services, to effectively address these potential losses.”
